The Story of Alex Griffiths & Currumbin Wildlife Sanctuary

Alex Griffiths was a flower grower and a beekeeper. His beautiful garden attracted hungry lorikeets, so to save his flowers, Alex decided to feed the birds himself. These birds started coming in flocks, as did the crowds of people!

Soon, Alex's garden grew into a home for many Australian animals and in 1976, Currumbin Bird Sanctuary became a National Trust of Queensland property. Today we know Alex's garden as Currumbin Wildlife Sanctuary and the home of the Currumbin Wildlife Hospital. Now, the Sanctuary is celebrating the 100th birthday of the man who started it all!
